By NCTA News

CURTIS, Neb. – Academic honors for students at the Nebraska College of Technical Agriculture were announced for the Spring Semester.

“The Aggies ended their academic year quite successfully with six students on the Dean’s List and 62 on the Deans Honors Roll,” said NCTA Dean Larry Gossen. “Grades for freshmen, in particular, improved in their second semester.”

Aggie students are very active in their coursework, as well as serving in student organizations, as campus leaders, and many on traveling, competition teams,” Gossen notes.

“As the only two-year campus of the University of Nebraska system, NCTA offers academics solely in veterinary technology and agriculture sciences,” said Jennifer McConville, associate dean. “Our graduates are well prepared for the workforce with an associate degree or college certificate.”

The second semester at NCTA began January 10. Commencement was Thursday, May 5 with 80 graduates.

Part of the University of Nebraska system, the Nebraska College of Technical Agriculture is a two-year institution with a statewide mission of preparing students for successful careers in agriculture, veterinary technology and related industries. NCTA is known for its affordable tuition, high job-placement rate for its graduates, and for the success of student teams in competitive activities including crops judging, ranch horse events, livestock judging, shotgun sports, stock dog trials, and intercollegiate rodeo. The college is consistently ranked as one of the best two-year schools in the nation.
